

Queen Mab's Alarmingly Mandatory Bridal Shower

Synopsis

Domineering Queen Mab, Ruler of all the Fairies, has ordered us, her Fairy Court, to join her in a hastily-put-together Bridal Shower, to celebrate this morning's engagement to the Duke...her twenty-ninth fiancé. She's determined the wedding will go through tonight, tonight! She bubbles over with girlish excitement to show off her bridal gown and open all the presents that have been bestowed upon her. She's a little surprised to see so many presents from her previous fiancés. Not one of Queen Mab's previous fiancés has actually made it to the altar, all twenty-eight of them, supposedly dying of natural causes "on the way over." Queen Mab begins to question precisely how dead they are, as they have each of them sent her presents to honor the day. The presents are rather undignified for a queen (a corn husk, a glob of uncooked dough, etc), but one of them, oh, one of them is from her current fiancé, Number Twenty-Nine himself! When it turns out his present is a farewell letter, the Queen tries to pull together her remaining dignity and turn her attentions to...Fiancé Number Thirty.